FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

THE ſurmiſe mentioned in our laſt, of the Dutch colony in Batavia having revolted, proceeded, it ſeems, from baron Imhoff the governor's marching with an army at the deſire of the queen of Bantam, againſt her huſband the king, whom he depoſed, becauſe of his being mad; which ſeems to be a diſeaſe in his family, after they attain to a certain age.

From Spain we hear, that the miniſters are taking all poſſible methods to raiſe a ſpirit of induſtry among the people of that kingdom, and to encourage them to improve their lands by huſbandry; at the ſame time they have granted charters for eſtabliſhing manufactures of fine woollen cloth and ſtuffs, and workmen and utenſils are expected from foreign countries for carrying on the ſame. And that on the 26th ult. chevalier d'Oſſorio, envoy extraordinary from the king of Sardinia, had a particular audience of his Catholic majeſty, at which he preſented a letter from the king his maſter, containing a demand of the infanta Donna Maria Antonietta in marriage for his ſon the duke of Savoy, as to which his Catholic majeſty returned a favourable anſwer.

Stockholm, Sept. 30. The Ruſſian miniſter has juſtly delivered to our court a very extraordinary memorial, in ſubſtance as follows: "That the empreſs of Ruſſia being determined to maintain the form of government in the manner it is at preſent eſtabliſhed in Sweden, and of which her Imperial majeſty is guaranty, ſhe muſt cauſe her troops to enter Finland, leſt, on the death of the reigning king, any motions ſhould be made contrary thereto? That thoſe are to continue there on the footing of friends; that they are to obſerve an exact diſcipline, and live entirely at their own expence, till ſuch time as the new king is proclaimed, and has made aſſurance by oath that he will maintain the preſent form of the government, and obſerve its treaties, particularly that of Neuſtadt, &c. That thoſe who act not in a friendly manner to the ſaid troops, are to be treated themſelves as rebels: But if, on the contrary, they conform to the deſire with which her Imperial majeſty is animated for the good of the Swediſh nation, ſhe promiſes to continue her favour and protection to them; and moreover engages, beſides her own guaranty, to procure the guarantyof ſome other powers.

Our miniſters have anſwered to the following effect: "That the prince ſucceſſor has already given public and ſufficient aſſurances, that his royal highneſs will not ſwerve or depart from his agreements, or ever undertake any thing to the leaſt prejudice of the rights and liberties of the kingdom: But that, if notwithſtanding all theſe ſolemn aſſurances, the empreſs of Ruſſia, perſiſts, on any pretence whatever, in the intention of making her troops paſs the frontiers of Finland, the king cannot otherwiſe regard ſuch a ſtep than as an act of hoſtility, and an open rupture; and that in ſuch caſe, his majeſty thinks himſelf juſtly authorized to employ, for his defence, the means which is in his power, &c."

In the month of Auguſt laſt there was a great change in the court of the grand Signior: The then Mufti was depoſed and baniſhed to a town in Aſia, with orders to repair to Mecca at the proper ſeaſon; and his brother, who was chief judge of Natolia, is diſmiſſed, and baniſhed to Synope, on the Black-Sea. A new Mufti has been made, who is a creature of the prime Vizir's; and ſeveral other changes have been made, all in favour of his dependents. Whether this will produce any change in the conduct of that court with regard to the affairs of Europe, is not yet known; but the prime Vizir has lately made a declaration in very haughty terms to the Ruſſian miniſter, that if the latter ſhould attack Sweden, the Porte will think themſelves obliged to aſſiſt their ally.

The Hiſtory of Europe.

The Dutch mails coming in late laſt week, and being both delivered in one day, we ſhall give the ſubſtance of them, with ſmall variation, from the poſtſcript of the London Evening-Poſt.

Beſides what was mentioned in our laſt, relating to the diſpoſitions towards a war, it is proper to add, ſays a letter from Conſtantinople of September 8, that the grand Vizir ſent for the Aga of the Janizaries a few days ago, exhorted him to keep his men as quiet as poſſible, and gave him a very large ſum of money, to be diſtributed among them, in order to give weight to his exhortations. The Aga of the Janizaries received orders at the ſame time to make ſome alterations in the quarters of the troops.

It has been reſolved to recal part of the troops actually on the frontiers of Perſia; which circumſtance, together with the arrival of an ambaſſador from Ali-Kouli-Kan, makes us conclude the Porte is well ſatisfied there is nothing to be feared from that quarter, even though the Perſian miniſter ſhould miſcarry in his negotiation. Orders are already iſſued for diſtributing along the Black Sea, the troops that are coming back from the frontiers of Perſia. Several corps of cavalry will alſo be drawn out of Natolia, and ſent to canton in the Weſtern provinces of the empire.——

If what comes below, in the article from Perſia, ſhould prove true, the ſtate of Perſia may call the attention of the Turks again Eaſtwards.

The Capigi-Baſhaw, that was lately ſent to the Kan of Crim Tartary, is returned from Bacciſarai, and has reported his commiſſion to the grand Vizir, but ſcarce any thing of it tranſpires in public. All we know, ſays the letter-writer, is, that corn and other proviſions are very plenty in Crim Tartary, and that the grand Signior's magazines may be very eaſily and ſpeedily fill'd, if there ſhould be occaſion. Another Capigi Baſhaw is to go with a commiſſion from his highneſs to the Kan of the Budziack Tartars. The Baſhaws of Turkey in Europe, have received orders to ſend up to court an exact account of the corn and forage in the magazines of their reſpective departments, and take care that the preſent ſtock be not diminiſh'd.

Some of the foreign miniſters are mightily alarm'd at theſe orders and diſpoſitions of the Porte. The French and Britiſh ambaſſadors have repreſented to the Ottoman miniſtry, what pains their principals have taken to keep peace in the North, and the Ruſſian and Auſtrian miniſters proteſt that they have no inclination to war; the Swedes ſay the ſame; and the Porte laughs in her ſleeve to ſee that certain courts have gone too far to retreat.

Letters from Perſia of the 10th of July, by the way of Moſcow, bring advice of a bloody battle fought a few days before, between the Shah Kouh, grandſon of Shah Nadir, Ibrahim Kan. The latter having aſſembled an army of 100,000 men, marched from Tauris in the month of June, for the province of Mazandaran, on the South coaſt of the Caſpian ſea, where the two armies came to a general engagement, and that of Ibrahim Kan was entirely defeated. He himſelf with great difficulty got off, after his troops and ſeveral Kans of his party had made ſubmiſſion to the conqueror.

Theſe letters add, that Ibrahim Kan having reach'd a caſtle on the frontiers of Curdeſtan, he was betray'd there by Meli Kouli Kan, who after putting out his eyes, deliver'd him up to Shah Kouh; and that the latter was going to march to Caſbin, in order to be crown'd there.

They now acknowlege at Madrid, that the affair of the Carraccas is become ſo ſerious, that the court has reſolved to ſend over forthwith 2000 regular troops, to bring the rebels to reaſon.

B

It is given out for certain, say the letters from Hamburgh, that the court of Vienna will bring upon the tapis next year, the election of a king of Bohemia: But at the same time it is whisper'd, that another German potentate may possibly get the start of the house of Austria in this election, though he does not design that kingdom for any of his own Relations. This seems very mysterious.

LONDON.

Extract of a letter from Gosport, dated Oct. 12.

"The following cruel and barbarous affair happened on board the Chesterfield man of war, which lies in ordinary in this harbour: About one o'clock on Sunday in the afternoon, the gunner being a little indisposed was in his cabbin, and his wife in the gallery roasting a fowl for dinner, there was no person else in the ship, but a French or Italian boy, about nineteen years of age, who was the boatswain's servant; he came behind the gunner's wife, while she was roasting the fowl, and gave her several blows on her head, with one of the scrapers that is used in scraping the ship's sides, which cut her head very much, and, after she fell down, the villain stuffed her mouth full of oakum and chips, gave her several other blows, then left her weltering in her gore, and went to the gunner her husband, knocked him down with a carpenter's mallet, and gave him so many blows, that he left him for dead; then broke open his chest, took his watch, money, several shirts and shifts, and other wearing apparel, took the gold rings from his fingers, then went to his wife, took her gold rings and ear rings; one being hard to come out, he cut it out of her ear, and left them both in that deplorable condition, took the ship's boat, and went up to Portchester, with the things he had stolen, then turned the boat adrift. It appears that he dressed himself in some of the gunner's cloaths, for his own cloaths were found in the boat: When the gunner recovered a little, which was not for some considerable time after, he crawled to the ship's side, and haled the next ship, when assistance came to him; then went to his wife, and found her in the condition above mentioned; she was soon after brought on shore to this town, where she still continues past all hopes of recovery, having not been able to speak since: She has several other marks of violence about her. Notwithstanding the most diligent search has been made after the villain, he has not been heard of."

Remarkable Occurrences Abroad.

A large army of locusts hath appear'd on the frontiers of Austria that darken'd the sun above a quarter of an hour, and divided into three columns, two took the route of Switzerland, and the third moved towards the Alpes.

The plague has broke out on the frontiers of Poland and has carried off a great number of people.

Several wrecks and merchandizes have been thrown on the coasts of Normandy, and, from the bad weather, they apprehended at Ostend dismal accounts from sea.

The trade at Dunkirk daily increases, and the talk of demolishing the harbour is quite dropt.

The Capt. of the Nazareth galley, and five more of the Maltese conspirators were lately broke alive upon the wheel at Malta; and at the same time nine slaves, four Jews, and three Greeks, all sew'd up in sacks, were thrown into the sea. The grand master is determined to punish the bashaw of Rhodes, who was the author of this bloody design, but the grand signior having interposed in his favour, may perhaps, alter his resolution.

All the men of war and frigates in the ports of Spain, have orders to hold themselves ready to sail on the first notice.

A Stomacher cover'd with diamonds, to the value of 400,000 pieces of eight, is preparing at Turin, as a present to the infanta of Spain.

A ship lately arrived at Florence from Algiers with the plague on board, 30 of her crew having died in the passage, all the effects on board were carried to the pest-house.

Don Louis d'Acunha, the old Portuguese minister, who died lately at Paris, in the 105th year of his age, is said to have left behind him memoirs of his own time, written with his own hand, and containing a great number of curious Anecdotes, relating to the courts and ministers of the several parts of Europe. Such a work as this, it is hoped, will not be suppress'd, as it must give great light into modern history, and the true characters of public persons. Might we not hope to find in it many things which respect ourselves, and our own great men? In particular, might it not inform us what was the consideration paid in 1735, and to whom the payment was made, for the very powerful and expensive fleet sent that year to Lisbon, under the conduct of Sir John Norris, to protect the kingdom of Portugal against the resentment of Spain? It is, I think, pretty well remember'd, that Nothing was brought to account on that remarkable occasion.

The RECIPE.

BEFORE creating Nature will'd
That Atoms into Forms should jar,
By me the Boundless Space was fill'd,
On me was built the first made Star.
By the proud Atheist I'm rever'd;
At me the Coward draws his Sword:
By the brave Hero I am fear'd;
Compell'd by me, Truth breaks her Word.
Scorn'd by the mock and humble Mind,
Yet often by the vain possess'd;
Heard by the Deaf, seen by the Blind,
I give the troubled Conscience Rest.
Than Wisdom's sacred Self I'm wiser,
And yet by every Blockhead known;
I'm freely given by the Miser,
Kept by the Prodigal alone.
The K———, God bless him, as 'tis said,
At me is sometimes in a Passion;
And even him I can persuade
To act against his Inclination.
As Vice deform'd, as Virtue fair,
The Courtier's Loss, the Patriot's Gains,
The Poet's Wealth, the Coxcomb's Care.
Fools, read, and take me for your Pains.

ANNAPOLIS.
